

Table of Contents

ARTICLES: American Cancer Society	1
Talking with Children About Cancer	1
Helping Your Child When a Family Member Has Cancer: Dealing with Treatment	5
• Introduction
• Why is it necessary to tell children about cancer treatment?
• What kind of information do children need about a parent's treatment?
• How much should I tell my children about my treatment?
• How can I tell if my child has enough information about my cancer treatment?
• How can I expect my children's lives to go on as before?
• How can relatives and friends help my children?
• Should I bring my child to the hospital with me?
• What should I tell my child's school about my illness?
• What if my child seems upset or embarrassed about the side effects of my treatment?
• How do families deal with the uncertainty of not knowing if treatment has worked?
• Does having cancer cause special problems in a non-traditional household?
• Are there special issues for teenagers in dealing with a parent's cancer?
Children's Reactions to the News About Diagnosis: Reactions Based on Age	23
• Newborns/Infants/Toddlers
• Preschoolers (3-5 years)
• School Age Children (6-12 years)
• Teenagers (13-18 years)
KIDPACKS &amp; ACTIVITIES	27
• Under 3
• 4-7
• 8-12
• Teen
FAQ – Frequently Asked Questions	35
• Questions about your ability to respond to your children
• Questions about how your children are affected by the diagnosis
• Questions about your ability to respond to the situation
• Questions about death and dying
RESOURCES	47
Dana-Farber Resources
Community Resources	54
Websites	56
• Family Connections: www.dana-farber.org/familyconnections
• For Families
• For Parents and Caregivers
• For Teens
• For Children
Pamphlets	64
• For Parents and Caregivers
• For Teens
• For Children
Books	68
• For Parents and Caregivers
• For Teens
• For Children
Videos	81
• For Parents and Caregivers
• For Teens	